

Panel members Include:

- ✓ Director, IT/IM Security and Infrastructure Planning Departmental Security Officer
Transports Canada
Government of Canada
- ✓ Corporate Chief Strategist, OCCIO
Ministry of Government and Consumer Services
- ✓ Manager, Chief Technology Office, Public Works and Government Services Canada
- ✓ Previous CIO,
Department of Environment
- ✓ e-Government and ICT Strategic Advisor

Friday June 20th, 2008
from 9:00am to noon at
Spratt School of Business,
Carleton University

Sponsored by:

Treading Gently: Public Service Systems that Lower Environmental Impacts

Government agencies are showing how digital systems can be used to re-think service delivery and citizen interaction. In the process, they are lowering the impact on the environment of many forms of social governance. Public sector services are 'going green' by:

- ✓ Cutting down on print materials such as taxes forms and booklets, where the use of e-filing saves a mountain of paper and lowers pressure on landfill sites and energy use;
- ✓ Reducing processing costs: doing things electronically eliminates paper drag, postage, and delays;
- ✓ Speeding up interactions with the public;
- ✓ Better targeting the flow of information, to reduce processing churn;
- ✓ Enhancing consultation with online services that eliminate travel; and Using IT to integrate systems and reduce overlap.

This executive roundtable with 80 of your peers will explore the streamlined, shareable systems and processes that allow the public sector to reduce society's environmental impact. By conserving better, these new approaches will help Canada respond to the radical needs of the new eco-economy.

Our keynote speaker is Robert G. Dowler Corporate Chief Strategist, OCCIO Ministry of Government Services, Government of Ontario.

Discuss:

Administration processes that allow for coordinated responses

Systems that assess new technologies

Processes to bring together public 'clusters' for shared action

Streamlining solutions in various data centers, different procurement processes, and so on

Join the free half-day executive session on public processes that build a greener country!
9:00 a.m. - Noon, Friday June 20, 2008; Carleton University, Ottawa RSVP NOW send your contact information to vitesseexecutiveroundtable@access-group.ca or by calling us at (416) 629-7924

* Please note: registration is not open to independent consultants and/or technology vendors. Attendance is contingent upon host acceptance